DID YOU KNOW THAT? Juliette "Daisy" Gordon Low (1860-1927), a deafened (became deaf at a later age) woman, founded the Girl Scouts of U.S.A. in Savanah, Georgia, in 1912. She also started troops in England and Scotland before she returned to her home state, Georgia. She was buried in her Girl Scout Leader uniform. The Illinois School for the Deaf, in 1919, was the first school to start a scout troop for deaf girls.

This founder of Girl Scouts of U.S.A. prided herself on her eccentricity and her stubbornness (which often got her into trouble) and used these qualities to show Victorian women that their lives could be whatever they dared to make them.

Juliette wanted young women to think big - to feel entitled to an education, career, an family if they wanted. Her conviction that girls should think of themselves as capable of becoming doctors, architects, or pilots, able to survive in the wild, and to know how to "secure a burglar with eight inches of cord." Her programs took thousands of girls out of their homes to the outdoors and on to professional careers. She gave to many the beginnings of self-determination.

At one time a doctor was consulted for an ear ache she was suffering, but instead of letting him treat her according to conventional medical knowledge, she insisted that he use silver nitrate because she had heard about it as a w treatment. Tragically, the potent solution rendered her partially deaf in e ear for life. In a freak accident at her wedding, a grain of rice lodged in her other ear. After its removal she was completely deaf in that ear. The Girl Scouts celebrate Daisy's birthday on Halloween.
